The Incorruptible Monks

of Northern Thailand

Who Are the Incorruptible Monks?

In Thailand, especially in the north where Theravada Buddhism is deeply rooted, some monks reach an elevated spiritual state through meditation, renunciation and strict observance of the Buddha's teachings. After their passing, the bodies of some of these monks remain in a state of preservation that defies ordinary scientific explanation, showing few or no signs of decay. These monks are regarded as examples of "arahants", enlightened saints who have reached high levels of spiritual purity and liberation from the cycle of rebirth.

These monks are venerated as masters who reached states close to nirvana.
